Garbed in overals and working as a day laborer in the rallroad yards here, the rice J. C. Trotter, former pustor of the Haleyville Okla. Methodist church, was arrested here today on a charge of embezzling church funds. The pastor, who escaped from the McAlester, Okla, jail while walt-ing trial, admitted his identity and added that "others" were im-plicated in the case, and that he was going to "spring a sensation" when he returned to Haleyville. "Some of the prominent and influential men in Haleyville and Hartshorn know as much as I do about this case," he said. "They are simply trying to make me the gont." The Rev. Mr. Trotter had been working here several days under the name of Oscar Kinsey Sheriff Beanmaster, who made the arrest, cald he would hold the pastor in custody, pending the arrival of a sheriff from Ha-leyville. The Rev. Trotter said he would not fight extradition.

NEW ENGLAND, N. D. Och The wheels of time turned backward 300 years here Sunday when an entire village forgot the dizzy pace of the modern world and knelt as did their Purltan faand knelt as did their Purltan fathers to kive thanks to the Divine Favor, granting them a bountiful harvest. For years farmers of this community watched their crops wither and die. Last spring the community joined in a common prayer for a more successful season. Sunday, the people gathered again to give thanks to the Divinity who, they believe, heard and granted their prayers. Pastors of the Catholic, Congregational and Lutheran churches led the thanksgiving service when the thanksgiving service when 600 farmers and their house-holds, who are not "too busy to believe in modern day miracles," turned their faces upward in the old hymn of harvest and thinksgiving, "Come Ye Thankful Peo-ple." The harvest of the last season has been the most bountiful in the history of this community
